

A Time That No One Knows

So dark and grey-
A place unheard of, A place not thought of,
What has this world come to be?
A dim light shines in the darkness;
Little hollows filled with mysteries.
This world is not what it was fifty years ago today.

The ones who remember what this place used to be
Are coming far and few.
Electronics have taken over; They seem to be everywhere you look;
Overpowering natural resources; All true power has ceased;
Little is known about what used to be.

All global efforts have failed;
All hopes and dreams shattered; All of nothing is left.
Look around and you will see, A dreamer looking to be free.
A world that has declined to theft
Most renowned centers being scaled.

Shot through a tunnel, A different vision emerges,
Flowing like grain through a funnel.
A sight of many splurges, Still many tattered,
A world recovering, But the pain is still hovering.

Bright rainbows, Deep blue seas
Shining sun, Starry Nights
Blooming flowers, Rainy Days
Baby's cry, Soldiers song

Once a cloud, Now a clear vision
Of the world that no one really knows.
Thoughts that jumble, thoughts that jingle-
Ever growing, Ever rising
A world that has grown, To bigger and better heights
To a time that some may know.
