
Harry Goldstein’s e-mail to daughter Laurie when he learns that Betty is dying:

I will remember her fondly for the affection we shared over the last 20 years. I am very proud of what Betty contributed to societal life and how she changed the course of life for women and men forever, and for the better. She has had great passion, energy, and a brilliant mind and aimed those attributes at making the world better for her passing through. She has earned a permanent place in history and deserves whatever peace and after life reward is out there. Suddenly it has hit me and I’m really shook emotionally. Fortunately, Joy is helping me through. Talk to you. Much Love.
