CAS

The Credential Assembly Service (CAS) centralizes and standardizes the undergraduate academic records of law school applicants to simplify the US law school admission process. Nearly all American Bar Association-approved law schools (and some non-ABA-approved law schools) require that applicants use the CAS.

The CAS will prepare a report for each law school to which you apply. The law school report contains information that the schools use, along with your application, personal essay, letters of recommendation, and other criteria, to make their admissions decisions. Information contained in the report includes an undergraduate academic summary; copies of all undergraduate, graduate and law/professional school transcripts; LSAT scores and writing sample copies, and copies of letters of recommendation processed by LSAC (Law School Admissions Council).

The registration fee for the CAS includes law school report preparation, letter of recommendation and transcript processing, and access to electronic applications for all ABA-approved law schools.
